TimeSlips: Creativity in Care

This presentation will introduce TimeSlips –which has been an innovative source of creative engagement for over two decades. The speaker, Sam Goodrich, will focus on the roots of what Timeslips is along with sharing tips for engaging with elders. Attendees will learn simple techniques to improve communication and build confidence to creatively engage friends, family members, or neighbors in shared moments of imagination -- with no right or wrong answers! Learn how to infuse creativity into everyday moments of care, and learn about the free resources that TimeSlips provides for friends and family members who care for those living with memory loss.

Presentation by Sam Goodrich

Sam Goodrich oversees various TimeSlips projects such as Tele-Stories, connecting artists with under-connected elders via phone, and Stage Right, a project in which seniors with dementia create and perform in their own original musicals. With a performance background and a personal connection to working with those with memory loss, Goodrich hopes to bring light to the benefits that creativity can have on a person with memory loss, as well as the relief it can bring to loved ones and care partners.
